1) Closing Remarks

Mr. Isao Nishiyama, Deputy Chief Executive of BRI expressed his gratitude to all participants for their contributions to the symposium. He thanked GRIPS for providing the venue and UNESCO for their sponsorship. Disaster management is a task that should be undertaken continuously at the global, national, local and community levels, and this symposium has been a reminder of that necessity. There are many tasks to be undertaken and research activities must be accelerated. Those guests returning overseas will be able to apply outcomes and lessons to their own environments.
